If you are experiencing personal issues like a family crisis, financial or housing difficulties, legal worries or other personal problems, then our social casework services could help you.

Social casework services can provide the support you need to address these issues so that you can return to work. It may involve:

- Building a clear understanding of your situation
- Strategies and techniques to help you address and manage your situation
- Accessing the right services and supports
- Negotiating on your behalf with services
- Developing a plan for managing the situation should it reoccur.

If you'd like further help with your personal situation, talk to your Employment Consultant and ask them to refer you to our social casework program. After you've been referred, we'll contact you to arrange an appointment time and to answer any further questions you may have.
